

Lisema Matsietsi has almost two decades of experience in finance and banking and is currently a digital strategy consultant, he has attended three prestigious business schools and has a master's in development finance from the University of Cape Town. He has experience in operations, financial, and strategy analysis and is also passionate about development finance. He also runs a YouTube channel called Being an Analyst where he shares his insights and tips on business analysis. He is involved in various social initiatives such as mentoring students, working with women-led NPOs, and volunteering at his church.